

NO STOMACH PAIN, GAS, INDIGESTION IN FIVE MINUTES

"Pape's Diapiesin" Is the Only Real
Stomach Regulator Known.

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that just that—makes Pape's Diapiesin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapiesin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapiesin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach regulator in the world—Adv.

Madge Irene Pierce and Glen H. Corliss Married.

A very pretty wedding occurred on the evening of Nov. 15, when Madge Irene Pierce and Glen H. Corliss were married at the home of Joe Corliss, where they will make their home for the future. The ceremony was performed by Rev. L. Mellor. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Mellor as the bride party entered the living room and took their places under a white wedding bell, supported by a green and white arch. The bride was dressed in navy blue and carried white carnations. She was attended by Miss Mildred Dunbar, and Marcellus Lane acted as best man. A large number of relatives and friends were present at the wedding and also the reception which followed. Many presents of silver, glass and linen were given them, also a box of kitchen necessities from the Hilltop club. Mr. and Mrs. Corliss started for Huntington for a two weeks' trip Thursday morning.

The Hilltop club meet Thursday with Mrs. Ethel Pierce. This week the meeting will be at Mrs. May Moulton's. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Buzzell and daughter, Rebecca, spent last week in town. RHEUMATISM AFTER HIS DAY'S OUTING

Hunting Trip on a Wet Day Brings Painful Results.

Once upon a time Charles Mullen, of Philadelphia, went gunning. It was a dismal rainy day, and long exposure to cold and wet brought on a severe attack of rheumatism. He was confined to his home.

A friend recommended Sloan's Liniment, citing his own case as evidence of its effectiveness. Mullen bought a bottle and applied it to his aching limbs. Soon improvement was noticed and he was able to return to business.

Mr. Mullen writes: "Since that experience I have never been without Sloan's Liniment in the medicine chest." You will find it soothes bruises, sprains, toothache and relieves lame back, neuralgia, in fact all external pains. At all druggists, 25c, 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

WILLIAMSTOWN

Frank B. Hoyt Has Bought L. O. Chapin's Store in Bristol.

Frank B. Hoyt has bought the stock, good will and fixtures of one of the leading dry goods stores of Bristol, of the owner, L. O. Chapin, and is to move there and take possession at once. Mr. Hoyt 12 years ago, and bought the farm on Baptist street, owned by Herbert L. Platt, where he did a good farming business for several years. Later he bought a controlling share of the stock of the J. K. Lynde Co., which was re-organized as the Hoyt, McAllister, Martin Co., Inc., where he continued in business for about three and one-half years, selling out his interest to other members of the firm last April, but continuing in the employ of the new firm, G. F. McAllister & Co., to the first of last September. Mr. Hoyt will take with him to his new place of business the best wishes of many friends that he has made during his stay here. He will ship his household goods by rail on Wednesday and will follow on Thursday if nothing prevents.

Seventy-five or more of the neighbors and friends of Rev. and Mrs. Alven M. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Granger, from this and adjoining towns, gathered at Odd Fellows' hall last Saturday evening, Nov. 18, for a parting word and hand clasp with them before they start for California. The proceedings were informal, the receiving line and speeches not being in evidence. A few old songs were sung, an original poem was read by the author, Mrs. Ida M. Whitcomb, and piano duets were pleasingly rendered by C. W. Cram and Mrs. Leon Poor and a vocal duet by Mrs. Poor and Miss Arlene M. Jeffords. Refreshments of cake, coffee and water were served in the dining room. All denominations were represented in the company and many reminiscences of earlier days were exchanged. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Flint, who were the first couple married by Rev. Smith, during his first pastorate in town.

Miss Clara Tanner of Marshfield, a former Goddard student, was in town over Sunday as the guest of Misses Ruby and Arlene Jeffords.

Would your skin stand this test?

The bright lights of an evening gathering show up mercilessly the defects of a poor complexion. But the regular use of makes it as easy to have a naturally beautiful skin as to cover up a poor one with cosmetics. It lessens the tendency to pimples, redness and roughness, and in a very short time the complexion usually becomes clear, fresh and velvety.

In severe or stubborn cases, Resinol Soap should at first be aided by a little Resinol Ointment. All druggists sell them.

Men with tender faces find that Resinol Shaving Stick prevents irritation.

LAVAS OF HAWAII.

Form One of the Most Interesting Features of the Country.

None of the island possessions of the United States exhibit more notable points of interest for the observant traveler or the naturalist than the Hawaiian Islands. The natives are typical of the race inhabiting many island groups of the south Pacific; the plant life has the attractive features of insular development in semitropical latitudes, the marine life of the warm waters is wonderful, but perhaps the most fascinating, instructive, and awe-inspiring of all the natural phenomena of Hawaii are furnished by its active volcanoes. The whole group of islands, extending in a chain for many hundreds of miles, is of volcanic origin, though some of the islets and reefs are but the wave-battered remnants of volcanoes whose fires have long since died out.

Approaching Honolulu by steamer from San Francisco, the traveler has the evidence of volcanic action plainly before him in the first land he sees, in the ash cone of Koko Head and the well-preserved craters of Diamond Head and the Punch Bowl, which are in the outskirts of the city. The high mountains of the island of Oahu are also made up of black lava—basalt—but they are largely covered with vegetation and one must go to the largest island of the group, Hawaii, for the wonderful demonstration of the process by which all these island mountains have been built up from great ocean depths. Kilauea, one of the most active, and Mauna Loa, one of the largest volcanoes in the world, are showing just how lava builds up mountains. Both of these volcanoes are included in the newly created Hawaii National park.

Since the time of Captain Cook the Hawaiian islands have been visited by geologists and others interested in the problems of volcanoes, and much has been written concerning them.

Professional paper 88, "Lavas of Hawaii and Their Relations," by Whitman Cross, of the United States geological survey, department of the interior, presents a summary of what is now known concerning the lavas of all the islands.

This paper is largely technical in its character, for it is intended primarily to serve as a basis for future study of the rocks by geologists.

It appears that there are many other kinds of lavas in Hawaii besides basalt, and many facts of association of the different lavas are of interest to students of the inner history of volcanoes.

While much is yet to be learned concerning the lavas of these islands, Mr. Cross shows that present knowledge of the rocks is sufficient to throw light on some of the most vexed questions pertaining to the origin and relations of the igneous rocks of the earth. The chemical relations are discussed with particular thoroughness. Petrologists will find valuable material in this report, bearing on many problems.

How to Select Wall Paper.

Nothing makes so much difference in the appearance of a room as the wall paper. If you have a room which somehow never seems right, no matter what you do to it, the reason is probably that the paper is wrong. As long as this unsuitable paper remains on your walls the artistic success of your room is doomed. All this means, of course, that you should take plenty of time in selecting wall paper, for if you make a mistake you will probably be forced to live with it for some time. Study your room before you go to the decorator's and decide about what you want. Never select your paper by samples only if you can possibly avoid it. If you do you are likely to be surprised when the paper is delivered, for it will probably be quite different in bulk from what you imagined from the sample.

In general it is better to select a plain color for a living room, or at least one which appears plain from a distance. On nearer inspection it may be found to be relieved by tiny lines. And, by the way, it is a good plan to look at the paper from a distance of six or eight feet when purchasing, because in this way you get a better effect of the general appearance which it will have when hung. Walls should always be considered as backgrounds for pictures, draperies and other decorative effects and should, therefore, be kept as soft and neutral as possible. Dull colors are best for dining rooms and living rooms, while the lighter shades are better for bed rooms.

The amount of light which a room receives should determine the color of the paper in most cases. Yellow tones will light up a room and give a sense of warmth which is desirable in sunless rooms, and red, if care is used in the selection, is also good for northern exposures. Green and blue are cold colors and should be used only in a room of fair size which receives more or less sunshine. If you wish to introduce these colors into your room but are not sure that they will be appropriate, it will probably be better to select hangings and cushions of these colors and choose a safe tan or buff for the wall paper.

A good test for choosing paper for a bed room is to select a pattern which would be restful to the eyes if you should be ill for some time. Never choose a bed room paper with a geometrical pattern, for it would be a torment if you should ever be ill and be obliged to stare at it day after day.

Lining bureau drawers with wall paper gives a pretty effect. See first of all if you have some remnants of the paper with which the walls of the room have been covered—that is to say, if the pattern is suitable for your purpose. At any rate remnants of attractive designs of wall paper may be bought at low prices. Flowered papers are especially good. Fortunately wall paper comes in just about the right width for lining bureau drawers. Fasten down the corners of the lining with thumb tacks.
